LETTER FROM THE DIRECTOR Expect the unexpected from your library.

Whenever we share the latest news from the library, we're often met with surprise and delight. Recently, we hit the road with our new electric bookmobile and debuted northern California's first 24-hour book kiosk at the Del Paso Heights Library. Both are a departure from what you might expect from the library. They're also great examples of how we're staying nimble to meet our community where they are.

With the return of in-person programming, our libraries were buzzing with new energy from familiar programs like book groups, English conversation groups, tutoring, and storytime. We expanded our Prom Drive for teens, play-based learning programs for children and their caregivers, and Lunch at the Library for youth. We brought people together from across the region with our new Enters the Chat speaker series and Superfest Disability Film Festival at the Tsakopoulos Library Galleria.

Our community's needs have changed over the years so we're adjusting how we serve you. We know how vital it is to get outside of our buildings and meet folks in their neighborhoods. We were thrilled to be back in our schools on class visits and at local community events.
Our team even took our popular Explore and Learn programs to community centers to provide caregivers and young children with fun and free ways to fuel their learning.

These connections both inside and outside of the library matter. We strive to expand access and remove barriers to using the library in all that we do. Libraries are for everyone. We look forward to seeing you at the library soon.

Regards,

Peter D. Coyl, MLIS Library Director & CEO

The Friends of Sacramento Public Library are our official fundraising partner and tireless library advocates. This fiscal year, the Friends raised $196,552 to support local library programs and systemwide efforts such as Book First and Summer Reading. Friends' support of Book First made it possible for the library to provide two books to every first-grade student at 181 eligible schools across Sacramento County. With their support over the years, we've provided books to nearly 100,000 kids in our region. Collectively, the Friends members volunteered 28,501 hours through their efforts with Book First, sales at the Book Den, and work in local libraries.

"I teach at a Title 1 school and many of my students have no books in their homes. They are thrilled to get to take home books. I even get thank you's from the parents."

REINVENT

The library launched new resources, programs and dedicated spaces to support young children and their caregivers, expanding access to free learning activities.

Del Paso Heights Library debuted an Early Learning Hub, a space designed for caregivers and their young children under five. Through everyday play activities, children made connections between shapes and colors, practiced fine motor skills, and built their vocabulary. The library also launched a systemwide Early Math initiative to foster basic math skills with our youngest learners.

"I was glad to reinforce I am on the right track."

"I learned how to apply early reading and early mathematics in everyday life such as at the grocery store."

Through simple activities, caregivers can help their children develop an understanding and vocabulary around concepts like measurement, comparison, patterns, matching and sorting while also learning to count.

LEARNING

EXPLORE & LEARN

The library expanded its play-based Explore and Learn program into local community centers. The drop-in programs served more than 741 kids and their caregivers at two community locations in North Sacramento funded by the California State Library, and three locations in South Sacramento funded by the City of Sacramento.

REFRESH

The return of in-person programing sparked a resurgence of new experiences at the library and beloved events for the community.

The library welcomed the community back with Enters the Chat, a speaker series featuring a diverse lineup of guests traveling to Sacramento to engage in thoughtful conversation. Its debut with the hosts of the Pulitzer Prize winning Ear Hustle podcast, attracted over 300 attendees to discuss the realities inside prison and post incarceration. The series continued with Sacramento-based author Ann Bannon, "Queen of

BIG IMPACT

Youth took the spotlight with the return of the library's Prom Drive and continuation of Lunch at the Library. Thousands of pieces of formalwear donated by the community found new homes through Prom Drive giveaway events. Over 800 teens shopped the free collection at 15 libraries to find their perfect prom outfit. Over the summer, the library enhanced Lunch at the Library with nutrition programming. A new mobile kitchen hit the road providing hands-on cooking demos to more than 700 children and distributing 250 boxes of food and produce.

BIG CHANGE Fair Oaks Library welcomed library goers back in June to a redesigned space with new carpet, furniture and paint. The $119,076 location refresh included a computer upgrade and investment into the collection.

REIMAGINE

The library developed innovative ways to meet the ever-changing needs of the community through partnerships, new ways to deliver services, and future planning.

REDUCED FOOTPRINT

The library hit the road with two new electric bookmobiles, which replaced the 25-year-which replaced the 25-yearold diesel vehicles thanks to a partnership and funding support from the Sacramento Metropolitan Air Quality Management District (Sac Metro Air District), California State Library and

State of California. The library on wheels visits communities with limited access to libraries including senior sites, residential communities, mobile home parks and assisted living facilities. Last year, bookmobiles logged over 10,000 miles visiting communities throughout Sacramento County. By switching to electric vehicles, the library will avoid approximately 13.2 metric tons of carbon dioxide emissions annually.

The Del Paso Heights Library debuted a 24-Hour Book Kiosk, the first of its kind in Northern California. The vending machine-style kiosk provides round-the-clock free access to materials that patrons can check out and return. The kiosk holds 250 of the latest books and DVDs available at the touch of your fingertips any time of day or night.

The library's digital collections and popularity continued to grow, providing users with on-demand access on any device. Digital circulation was nearly equal to physical circulation in FY 2022-2023.

VISION FOR THE FUTURE

The library released its facilities vision plan to provide 21st century library spaces and facilities that support high-quality library services for Sacramento County's diverse communities. The plan incorporated input from thousands of Sacramento County residents, library staff and representatives of the Joint Power
